The Southern Rhône sets a new benchmark in 2016, while the North also excels

When I first tasted the 2016 reds from the Southern Rhône, I realized immediately I needed to do one thing: Taste them again. That was back in the summer of 2017, as I visited numerous top estates in the region, tasting from barrel. I was struck by how vividly ripe the wines were, yet also detailed and fresh.

Comparing them to other benchmark vintages, they had the tannic spine of 2010 and 2005, the racy length and cut of 2011 and 2001, and the ripe fruit of 2015 and 2009. But I had never seen all of these characteristics combined in a single vintage. Simply put, I hadn't tasted wines before that were so rich and electric at the same time.

I wasn't the only one who suspected something truly special was in the making. One of the vintners I visited was Mounir Saouma, whose Châteauneuf-du-Pape cuvées have established a new paradigm for the appellation. "2016 is something totally new," he told me at the time. "We don't have words for it yet. There is something unusual between the color and the tannins. When you pour the wine and see the color, it's so dark. But then the wine is so fresh, the tannins so integrated. We don't know why, but it's doing its thing."

E. Guigal managing director Philippe Guigal has high hopes for Châteauneuf-du-Pape estate Domaine de Nalys, which his family purchased in 2017. Nalys is best known for its white wines, two of which rated outstanding in 2016.

So I went back to the region this past summer, visiting a number of domaines to taste the '16s again. Meanwhile, I was in the process of reviewing nearly 300 samples of finished, bottled 2016 Southern Rhône reds in blind tastings at our New York office. It was here that my initial impressions were confirmed, and I now consider 2016 the most impressive vintage I've tasted since I began covering the Rhône Valley with the 2002 harvest. Overall, I give the Southern Rhône a rating of 99 points, its highest mark ever.

Since my previous report ("Rhône Boom," Nov. 30, 2017), I have reviewed nearly 950 wines from the Rhône Valley. This includes Southern Rhônes from the 2014, 2015 and 2017 harvests in addition to the 2016s, as well as nearly 300 Northern Rhônes from the same set of vintages. In total, 70 percent of the wines under review achieved ratings of 90 points or higher on the Wine Spectator 100-point scale, 116 of them in the classic range of 95-plus. (A free alphabetical list of scores and prices for all wines tasted is available at WineSpectator.com/113018.)

Souma's early assessment has been borne out by other vintners. "2016 is the first time I've seen a vintage like this," says Marie Giraud, whose family-owned domaine is among the stars in Châteauneuf-du-Pape. "Very warm days, but very cold nights. So, you have maturity, color and freshness. You taste the wines and you think the domaine must be at elevation, the wines are so fresh. All the cépages did well and it was a good yield. For me, it's the best since we started in '98."

Of the 58 Châteauneuf-du-Papes from the 2016 vintage in this report, all but one earn outstanding ratings of 90 or more points, a stellar performance. Leading the way is the Domaine St.-Préfert Châteauneuf-du-Pape Collection Charles Giraud 2016 (99 points, $105), a towering wine made from a blend of Grenache and Mourvèdre that delivers a core of steeped plum, blackberry purée and warm cassis inlaid liberally with ganache, graphite and Turkish coffee notes, all while remaining fresh and driven, the hallmark of the vintage's profile. It is closely followed by the Domaine Giraud Châteauneuf-du-Pape Grenaches de Pierre 2016 (98, $120), a pure Grenache bottling that delivers the essence of the vintage, displaying a gorgeous core of raspberry and plum fruit that is seamless and pure, with a seductive mouthfeel.

Other top 2016 Châteauneuf-du-Pape reds include the Domaine Giraud Châteauneuf-du-Pape Les Gallimardes 2016 (97, $115), Domaine de la Janasse Châteauneuf-du-Pape Vieilles Vignes 2016 (97, $120), Roger Sabon & Fils Châteauneuf-du-Pape Le Secret des Sabon 2016 (97, $215), Domaine St.-Préfert Châteauneuf-du-Pape Auguste Favier Réserve 2016 (97, $62) and Château de Vaudieu Châteauneuf-du-Pape Amiral G. 2016 (97, $120). Domaine de Beurenard, Le Clos du Caillou, Clos St.-Jean, Domaine de la Mordorée, Domaine de Cristia, Château Sixtine and Le Vieux Donjon also turned out classic-rated reds. A few leading producers, including Château de Beaucastel, Domaine du Vieux Télégraphe and Domaine du Pégau, had not released their 2016s in time to be included in this report.

MOLESWORTH IN THE RHÔNE

In-depth, firsthand reports from more than a dozen top estates WineSpectator.com/RhôneTrip2018

While top Châteauneuf-du-Papes now command triple-digit prices and most others are north of $50 per bottle, there are still cellar-worthy value plays. Look for the Clos du Mont-Olivet Châteauneuf-du-Pape 2016 (93, $43), Vignobles Diffonty Châteauneuf-du-Pape Cuvée du Vatican 2016 (94, $40) and Château Fortia Châteauneuf-du-Pape Cuvée du Baron 2016 (92, $47). (For a roundup of the new generation of vintners in the region, see “Fresh Faces in Châteauneuf,” page 69.)

As the Southern Rhône basked in warm, dry days and cool nights during the 2016 growing season, the quality of wines from outside the glamour appellation of Châteauneuf-du-Pape are also compelling. Gigondas, located to the northeast of Châteauneuf, has steadily upped its quality over the past decade and is now turning out a growing number of excellent wines. (For an in-depth look at this fascinating appellation, see “A Star Rises,” page 76.)

Vacqueyras, which neighbors Gigondas, is another source of delicious, plump and mouthfilling reds, typically ready for consumption within just three to five years from their vintage date. The lush Domaine Le Colombier Vacqueyras Vieilles Vignes 2016 (93, $25) and ripe Montirius Vacqueyras Le Clos 2016 (93, $30) are outstanding examples.

Overall, more than two-thirds of the 257 Southern Rhône wines from the 2016 vintage in this report earn ratings of 90 points or higher. That means you can expect high quality at all levels of the hierarchy. The AOCs of Cairanne and Rasteau are former Côtes du Rhône-Villages that have been elevated to their own cru status in recent years. The Domaine de Beaufort Rasteau Les Argiles Bleues 2016 (92, $38) delivers warm, lush raspberry and blackberry fruit offset by a racy graphite note, while the Brotte Cairanne Domaine Grosset 2016 (90, $18) is fresh and focused, with notes of cherry, plum and raspberry purée. The Brotte also offers bang for the buck, as do many basic Côtes du Rhône bottlings, such as the Jean-Louis Chave Sélection Côtes du Rhône Mon Coeur 2016 (91, $24).

There are plenty of late-release 2015s in the marketplace as well. This vintage has a riper, more fruit-driven aspect, without the racy edge of the '16s, providing a more hedonistic profile. The Boutinot Côtes du Rhône-Villages Cairanne La Côte Sauvage 2015 (92, $20) is a prime example.

The hunt for values has rarely been easier. There are nearly 200 Southern Rhône wines in this report, covering a range of recent vintages, that earn ratings of 88 points or higher while costing $25 or less. (Our coverage of the Southern Rhône continues with an overview of the region and its myriad appellations, “ABCs of the Southern Rhône,” on page 91.)

While the Southern Rhône establishes a new benchmark in 2016, the north isn't far behind. In fact, the 2016 Northern Rhône wines are a very worthy follow-up to the 2015s, which set their own benchmark for quality in a 99-point vintage. In the current year, the north earns an overall rating of 97 points.

Compared with the south, which saw near idyllic weather all season long in 2016, the north got off to a late start due to a wet and cloudy spring. Flowering ran two to three weeks behind schedule and coulure was rampant through the valley, resulting in a lower crop yield. Hermitage was hit by hail in April, reducing its crop size further. But from the end of July through September, the weather was hot with basically no rain. This speeded up the ripening and put the harvest back on track in terms of timing. In mid-September, a few light showers spurred the final stretch of ripening, and then an Indian summer persisted through October, allowing growers to pick at their leisure.

The Châteauneuf-du-Pape vineyards of Domaine Giraud yielded stunning wines in the exceptional 2016 vintage, producing three classic-rated reds that offer gorgeous flavors and seductive mouthfeel.

"I really liked '16 from the start," says Jean-Louis Chave, a Hermitage-based vigneron, as he describes watching the wines develop in his cellar. "Some folks complained about the heat in summer. It was hotter than '15, but the vines did not suffer. The lower crop yield was the reason why ripening continued without the vines shutting down."

In general, the 2016 reds are ripe, focused and pure. Hermitage is the standout, as the wines show a level of concentration—likely from their very low yields—that sets them apart. The whites have scintillating freshness and purity. New releases from the Northern Rhône tend to lag behind those of the south; consequently there are just 163 Northern Rhône wines from 2016 in this report, with the bulk to arrive through the fall and winter and into early next year.

Early returns, however, show how strong a vintage it is, with 90 percent of the 2016s under review earning ratings of 90 points or higher, 19 of them at 95-plus. The vast majority are whites, with the Georges Vernay Condrieu Coteau de Vernon 2016 (98, $180) leading the way. It's nearly matched by the François Villard Condrieu Le Grand Vallon 2016 (97, $60). Overall, the 2016 Northern Rhône whites are the best since the 2006 vintage.

Made from Viognier, Condrieu is one of the wine world's most exotic dry whites, laden with apricot, nectarine, melon and anise notes that are typically allied to a lush and rich texture. In recent years, vignerons such as Villard have aimed for a fresher style by moderating the use of new oak and bâtonnage (stirring of the lees). The Delas Condrieu Clos Boucher 2016 (93, $95) is a fine example.

Some producers are holding fast to the richer style. The E. Guigal Condrieu La Doriane 2016 (95, $135) is the leading example, offering showy singed hazelnut and matchstick notes in front of unctuous peach, pear, fig and quince.

Although Château-Grillet exists within the boundaries of Condrieu, it is in fact its own appellation. The late-release Château-Grillet 2015 (95, $NA) is the best vintage for this estate under its new ownership, which took over in 2011. This gorgeous white delivers rich yet detailed flavors of persimmon, quince, yellow apple, melon and pear, with flashes of almond, acacia and jasmine.

Outside of Condrieu, the Marsanne and Roussanne grape varieties take over. Bottlings to look for include the Delas Hermitage White Domaine des Tourettes 2016 (96, $105), the top release so far, and the Ferraton Père & Fils Hermitage White Les Miaux 2016 (94, $81), which is also stellar. These wines offer ripe orchard and tropical fruit notes gilded with honeysuckle and jasmine.

St.-Joseph whites provide a similar flavor profile at a lower price point. The François Villard St.-Joseph White Mairlant 2016 (94, $35) and Julien Pilon St.-Joseph White Dimanche à Lima 2016 (94, $33) are both lovely examples. Of the 70 2016 Northern Rhône whites I reviewed, 63 earn ratings of 90 points or higher.

"But '16 has totally grown on me. All the finesse and elegance—I just couldn't see the full development early on. But after coming out of oak, blending and so on, the midpalate just started to grow and grow."

Claire Darnaud, Delas

Delas winemakers Jacques Grange and Claire Darnaud

The reds are also special in 2016, with 85 of the 92 bottlings in this report rated outstanding. Yet, unlike Chave, many vignerons I spoke with felt that the vintage snuck up on them a bit.

"We underestimated it at the beginning," says Claire Darnaud, who makes the wines at Delas alongside Jacques Grange. "But '16 has totally grown on me. All the finesse and elegance—I just couldn't see the full development early on. But after coming out of oak, blending and so on, the midpalate just started to grow and grow."

The Delas St.-Joseph Ste.-Épine 2016 (94, $78) epitomizes the vintage, offering a deep core of red and black currant fruit steeped gently with anise yet backed by a very bright iron edge on the finish. The top-scoring reds I've tasted so far check in just slightly higher, at 95 points. Eric & Joël Durand's gorgeous Cornas Confidence 2016 (95, $70), Franck Balthazar's lively Cornas Chaillot 2016 (95, $84) and Louis Chèze's pure Côte-Rôtie Bellissima 2016 (95, $60) are all fine examples.

Late-release Northern Rhône merit both collector and consumer interest. The second wave of the 2015s hit shelves this summer and they backed up their early-release colleagues in terms of quality. Four red 2015s earned 98 points: the A. Clape Cornas 2015

(98, $140) and Jean-Louis Chave Hermitage 2015 (98, $325), along with a pair of Hermitage cuvées from M. Chapoutier, the Ermitage L'Ermite 2015 (98, $565) and Ermitage Le Méal 2015 (98, $380). Overall, there are nearly 100 late-release 2015s in this report, including bottlings from Jean-Michel Gerin, R. Rostaing, Alan Voge, Pierre-Jean Villa and Tardieu-Laurent.

From north to south and red to white, from ageworthy collectibles to gutsy drink-by-the-case values, the Rhône Valley has long delivered a steady stream of choice to consumers. In 2016, it's an ocean of riches.

Rating Northern Rhône Vintages

2016	97	An admirable follow-up to 2015. A wet spring led to a late-running season; Hermitage was hit by hail in April, reducing the crop, yet hot weather from July through September spurred ripening and an Indian summer persisted through October. Reds are ripe, focused and pure; whites are scintillating, with freshness and purity	Hold
2015	99	The north's new benchmark; a vintage marked by heat and drought, but without the downside as nights were cool, maintaining acidity, and rains well-timed for ideal ripening. Reds are rich in both fruit and terroir , with ample but integrated structure; whites are vibrant and pure. Rivalled only by 2016, 2010, 1990 and 1961	Hold
2014	89	An inconsistent year, with rain in June and July leading to disease pressure. Fine weather in August and September yielded excellent results for some growers, while others had more difficulty; reds more heterogeneous than whites	Drink or hold
2013	91	Dry, cool growing season; vintners who picked quickly, ahead of late-season rains, were very successful. Reds are pure, ripe and focused; whites are gorgeously aromatic and lively	Drink or hold
2012	92	Similar in profile to the south, with reds marked by solid, ripe fruit and refined, lengthy finishes; the best should age well. Whites also excellent, though not as vivacious as '11. A very consistent year	Drink or hold
2011	92	Early, warm start to the growing season, but cool, wet second half. Syrah performed well through harvest, which extended late; more consistent than the south, with many excellent wines	Drink or hold
2010	98	Excellent growing season backed by well-timed September rain and Indian summer led to a late harvest of terrific quality. Reds are racy and loaded with minerality; whites are bright, with gorgeous definition	Hold
2009	96	Warm, dry season led to early harvest, but mid-August rain and cool nights kept grapes fresh. Reds are rich and polished, whites ripe and rounded; excellent overall and very consistent, with normal yields	Drink or hold
2008	86	Cool, gray season made ripening reds difficult. Some successes, but many lean, herb-inflected wines; whites are excellent, with ripe tropical fruit flavors and tangy acidity. A tough year, but better than '02	Drink

Older vintages of exceptional quality: 2005, 2003, 1999, 1998, 1995, 1990, 1989, 1985, 1982, 1979, 1978, 1976, 1969, 1966, 1964, 1961, 1959

Vintage ratings: 95-100, classic; 90-94, outstanding; 85-89, very good; 80-84, good; 75-79, mediocre; 50-74, not recommended Drinkability: "NYR" means most of the wines of the vintage are yet to be released; "drink" means most of the wines of the vintage are ready to drink; "hold" means most of the ageworthy wines have yet to fully mature; "past peak" means most of the wines are declining rather than improving.

Rating Southern Rhône Vintages

2016	99	This truly rare vintage is a new benchmark. The growing season was warm during the day but cool at night, with an unusually large diurnal swing that led to slow, even ripening across all varieties while maintaining acidity. Reds are laden with fruit, yet extremely racy and fresh in feel; whites are pure, brimming with energy	Hold
2015	97	Ideal spring conditions were followed by warm, dry weather through July and then heavy rains in August. Earlier-ripening Viognier and Syrah struggled a bit, while later-ripening Grenache and Mourvèdre excelled; reds are rich, ripe and full of powerful fruit. In the style of 2009 and 2007, but with better definition	Hold
2014	88	Season similar to the north, with a good start, but then persistent rains followed by more humid weather through September. Earlier-ripening areas favored as disease pressures built steadily; sorting tables critical to cull berries, with yields markedly lower as a result. Trickiest vintage since 2008	Drink or hold
2013	89	Cool but dry growing season, with Grenache yields drastically reduced once again and Grenache-reliant wines lacking some depth and ripeness; wines buttressed with Syrah and Mourvèdre are fresh, pure and floral-edged	Drink or hold
2012	93	Small crop following severe coulure on Grenache, but the wines are fine-grained and lengthy, with deliciously ripe flavors; well-balanced and should cellar well	Drink or hold
2011	91	Warm spring, but cool, wet weather in July and August led to uneven ripening; Indian summer saved the vintage. Grenache is light, but Syrah and Mourvèdre strong, so blending key; heterogeneous from domaine to domaine	Drink or hold
2010	98	Cool, windy spring led to a drastically reduced crop; growing season marked by warm days and cool nights, with a late harvest stretching into October, resulting in beautifully ripe, racy, terroir -driven wines for aging. The spine of '05 with extra flesh	Hold
2009	94	Warm, dry growing season, with heat wave arriving after veraison so ripening was fast but even; grapes retained acidity thanks to cool nights. Reds have pure fruit and polished tannins	Drink or hold
2008	88	Cool, wet spring and humid growing season saved by mistral at end; a small crop, with many producers eliminating cuvées. Quality very heterogeneous, but some excellent wines were made	Drink
